Large Audiences Welcome the New Pastor

Both Services. At the Second Presbyterian Church yesterday there were large audiences at both the morning and evening services, which were conducted by Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, of Fond du Lac, Wis., who has been called to the pastorate of the church. That many additional chairs and benches were brought into the large audience-room showed the interest taken in the new pastor. Mr. Milburn is thirty-one years old, smoothly shaven, has a pleasantly modulated voice, and his audience from first to last listened with the closest attention. He is five feet ten or eleven inches in height, of athletic mold and graceful and impressive in manner. He took for his text at the morning service a clause from the fifteenth verse of the third chapter of Genesis:

It shall bruise thy head and thou shalt bruise his beel. In beginning his sermon he said these words were a prophecy of one of the master spirits whose privilege it is to behold the visions of the far-off years. "Men," said Mr. Milburn, "are willing to think of Jesus as a Savior, but they want to keep Him apart from the terrific action of the world. They want Him, but they want Him in an idyllic column as a stainless light. The redemptive power of His grace they yearn for. The redemption they seek is the redemption wrought out by what has been called by Matthew Arnold, with exquisite felicity of phrase, the sweet reasonableness of Jesus, the sweetness and the light of Christ. They believe in the gospel of the lute, but not in the gospel of the storm. They believe that man should go to heaven in a polite and gentle way; that the race should be translated to the empyrean on the bosom of madrigals, anthems and symphonies. But their faith staggers at a redemption through sears, through temptation, through suffering, through the penitential tears of shame, through the elegies of sorrow, through the nocturnes of the conscience, through the dirges of the heart, through the via dolorosa of the Nazarene, through the crown of thorns that diademed the monarch of the race. A Savior bruising the head of the serpent, a Savior triumphant, that is reasonable enough, but the serpent bruising the head of the Savior -that is a spectacle quite revolting to the refined ideal of these latter days whose literature is sick with sweetness and dazzling light. In other words, the world's objection to a Savior does not reach to the Jesus that discoursed about the lilies of the field, but to the Jesus that died despised and dis-honored upon Golgotha. It is not to the conqueror but to the wounded conqueror that the world refuses to yield its allegiance

"Darwin tells us that the animal in us is a legacy descended from the brute, that even our intellect, our affection, our voli-tion, these attributes wherein we had held ourselves above all that had gone before and akin with the life and love of God—even these we are told are inheritances and bequeathed from our dead ancestry, the ape. Whether they are right or wrong I do not know. That the animal in man is related with the lower world of life I see no reason to confess. You say that this is shocking, that the animal is an unworthy progenitor of man. It is true it is not a pleasant reflection, but might not the animal object as well as man? Might not the unworthy ancestor disown, if he could, his yet more unworthy son—the son that, led by a better, light, that, living under a nobler regime, yet loves the darkness rather than the light; the son that has debased his glory in the dirt, that has sold his birthright, that has tarnished the crown that adorned him. Might not the animal in the ape object to the animal in the man as being altogether unworthy of such an ancestry; as being nothing but a

"However this may be," the preacher con-tinued, "this at least is true, that the life of man is the theater of a tremendous drama between the spiritual and the animal power in him; between blood and light, between might and right, between the base and the good. Here on the one side is hate and greed clamoring for possession, no matter what hearts be wounded, no matter what lives be bruised. This is the animal in man, the savage strain yet left in him, the remnant of untamed passion and unbroken lust, his heritage of blood and fire from the fiercely warring elements of life. But there is another element in man, that of reason, of love, of truth; the element where he sees the face of God. It is this element that is subjugating the world. This century is witness to a conquest unexampled in its grandeur. Old theories are being banished, traditions unmasked, dreams are being dissolved, everything that we loved exploded. Our schemes are being sadly broken by the severe and unrelenting hand of truth. Yet the great cosmic intellect is going deeper in the business of the world. Truth glows more brightly. Tenderness and nity are more brightly. Tenderness and pity are breaking down the barriers of race, and nations, and church, and sect. These waves are widening in their circles and they shall widen forevermore until they close about every land and fold the nations in the one universal brotherhood of man. The conqueror's heel is on the serpent's head, the serpent's head of ignorance, of national feud, of ecclesiastical arrogance and fraud."

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Sermon of Dr. Hale on the Promises Given At the First Presbyterian Church last evening the Rev. Dr. John Hale, of Chicago, preached from the first epistle of John, third chapter, second verse: Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is.

"Almost every week bears witness to us." said Dr/ Hale, in beginning his discourse "that our life is transient. The aches and pains, the vacancies in the ranks of our friends, the processions winding slowly through the streets all remind us that we are only sojourners here. Our thoughts naturally enough turn to our future state. and we think, as we learn of the death of friends 'Where have they gone? Where are we going? What shall we do there? What shall we be like?' We ask these questions, but the sky is silent and we naturally turn to the word of God for answer. When we come to compare divine revelation, which is comparatively meager, to the pictures of heaven presented in the mythological religions of ancient times, it would seem that we are afforded little idea of the hereafter.

"While the glorious life to come is drawn for us in the New Testament to some after all it is extent. vet but outlined. The Egyptian twenty centuries ago could tell us more about the future state than has ever been learned since; could tell us even where was the gate of hell. We cannot begin to match the picturesque detail of these mythological stories. The Bible does not pretend to answer our curious questions or teach us anything concerning the life to come, like the bold descriptions of the ancients. What pictures the Bible does give do pretend to be photographs. it did give exact representaons of the future life, we might become so interested in the picture as to forget to study its sober teachings. It not only tells us there is a heaven, but how to know it. It is not a florid description, like the old mythologies give, but a finished argument. The central figure is not heaven itself, but God, The two great truths it teaches are first, the existence of a living, loving God, and second, that we are God's children. Heaven becomes a serene faith in every man's life just in proportion as sonship beof heaven is elevating depends upon how it is received. We may lose paradise by dreaming of it. Even the Christian Church bave been driven.

has believed the divine revelations and yet practiced the inquisition; believed in heaven, and yet become as cruel and intolerant an aristocracy as was ever known.

"If our dream of Heaven," continued the Doctor, "is luxury eternal we had better not dream of it. I believe it has a deteriorating effect on any man to paint pictures in colors with which he is not familiar. A strenuous and virtuous life here is fittingly crowned in the life to come. Earth is something more than a dream because heaven crowns it. God a dream because heaven crowns it. God sends us out for the strenuous duties of life by telling us that after labor comes rest-rest in its freedom from sin, its communion with God. God did not draw the picture of heaven, but left it to come into men's minds as they became fit to properly receive it. There is a constant desire all through the Old Testament to know God. Where is there a yearning to have Him revealed like that which pervades the Psalms? It was thousands of years before the words father and son were used as they are to-day. Jesus Christ, the son, brought life and immortality to man. God taught men to know what sonship is. Let men live near to God and they will never doubt heaven. If I ever doubt the future world I go and stand at the grave of my father. There, I think of his good life, his noble traits, and then I am convinced he must be living with God. As there is a God in heaven, who has given His Son to us, He Talks of Y. M. C. A. Workers on the Need of Missionary Preachers.

He is, shall see Him and be with Him."

At Meridian-street M. E. Church last evening a meeting was held in which a number of representatives of the Y. M. C. A., who have been attending the conference in this city, took part. Mr. F. W. Douglass, secretary of the association in this city, introduced Mr. George S. Fisher, of Topeka, Kan., who took charge of the meeting and introduced each speaker. The first speaker was Mr. J. R. Mott, secretary of the international committee, of New York, who has special supervision of the work now going on in the colleges of the land among the students. He spoke of the beginning of the college movement, as it is called, in 1886, Moody's summer school at Northfield, Mass. "There were 250 college men there from ninety colleges reading and studying the Bible," said Mr. Mott. "We were together four weeks. We had been there about half that time, when a returned missionary from China came to Northfield, and he spoke of foreign mission work. He said mission work was a war of conquest.

"A week later came Dr. Pierson, with his theme that all should go and go to all lands. A few days later was held a meeting that I believe will be as famous as the Williams straw-stack scene. There were ten men representing ten different nationalities, and they gave burning appeals for more workers in each of their own countries, that there was a need for young men and young women. A thrill of the Holy Ghost went through that audience. At the close of those Northfield meetings one hundred young men resolved that, God willing, they would go to foreign mission fields as fast as they might be called for. The world can be evangelized in this generation. It will take about twenty thousand missionaries to preach the gospel to reach every one before the year 1900. The movement begun at Northfield now includes 5,200 of the best young men and women of our land, 250 of whom have already sailed to mission fields." Dr. Luther Gulick, of Springfield, Mass., was the next speaker. He spoke feelingly of the duty that rested upon all of freeing their brethren from the bondage of sin by carrying the gospel to the heathen. Remarks were also made by Mr. George Helmick, who will sail in a short time for the Soudan, Africa, to enter the mission field; Mrs. M. King, who is on her way to join her husband in Africa, also spoke briefly. Similar services were held at the Tabernacle Church, and during the afternoon speeches on missionary labor were given to men only at the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

Seventhe Day Adventists. The State Association of the Seventh-day Adventists continued its proceedings yesterday at the church of that denomination on Central avenue. At 5 o'clock in the morning a social meeting was held, and at 9 o'clock W. H. Wakeman, of Iowa, delivered an address on "Health and Temperance." He used illustrative charts to show the nutritive value of food and its effect upon bealth. Intemperance, he said, is a powerful factor in the tearing-down process of the nerve tissues, and with it goes improper diet. The two are intimately connected in the matter of producing injurious effects in the human system. At 10:30 in the morning regular church services were held, at which Elder Corliss spoke on "Church Government." He noted the value of organization and perfeet harmony, upon which, he said, de-pended the success of church government. He also spoke of the officers of the church and their duties in advocating unity and persevering in their work. At 1:30 in the afternoon a brief session was held for the children. J. H. Darling, recently returned from England, resorted to delays till a shower set in and spoke to them on Sabbath-school work and its value as a mental and moral educator. Sunday-school pupils, he said, must not only be enthusiastic in their work, but it should be characterized by patience and sincerity. At 4 o'clock a short meeting was held, at which the subject of home and foreign missions was discussed, and in the evening the day's services closed with Willoeby Again Optains a Verdict. Joseph Willoeby brought suit some months ago in the Circuit Court of Marion county against the Citizens' Street-railroad Company for $10,000 damages, claiming that on June 26, 1888, he was rudely thrown from a moving street-car by the conductor, on North New Jersey street. From the fall it was alleged that hip disease resulted. The plaintiff claimed that he was ready to pay his fare, but the company claimed that he was attempting to steal a ride. He was given a verdict for $6,500, but a new trial was granted. The jury disagreed and the case was taken to Johnson county on a change of venue. The trial there was closed Saturday, the jury bringing in a ver-dict for the plaintiff for $7,000. Several of the jurors were in favor of giving him $10,-000, and one voted for $15,000.

Memorial Services to Be Held. The Central Prohibition Club proposes to hold services relative to the death of Dr Ryland T. Brown. While the services will be in charge of the club it is the wish to have an active participation therein of the persons and societies with whom the Doctor was connected in his various lines of educational, political and scientific work. The services are to be held at the Third Christian Church at a date to be hereafter selected. The funeral of the Doctor will occur this morning, at 10 o'clock, at his late residence, No. 13 Central avenue.

Marion County Farmers. The Marion County Agricultural and Horticultural Society will hold its regular monthly meeting in the rooms of the State Board of Agriculture, in the State-house, Saturday next. Papers will be read on "Some of the Differences between First-rate Farming and Slip-shod Farming," by Dr. E. H. Collins, and on "What can an average Indiana Farmer do to Increase his Profits?" by Mr. Caivin Fletcher, of Spencer.

Disturbances at a Picnic. The police were notified last night of several disturbances at the Broad Ripple picnic yesterday. Charles Lasher was arrested for tighting, and Levi Lohman for being drunk and disorderly.

Thieves Took Away Clothing. Burglars entered the house of C. C. Tomkins, No. 325 North Mississippi street, last evening while the family were at supper and carried off some clothing.

Boyle Says the New York Team Needs Practice to Make a Better Showing.

LOCAL BASE-BALL.

Boyle Writes that Lack of Practice Is the Trouble with the New York Team. Charles Wood received a letter, yesterday, from Henry Boyle, in which the latter says the New Yorks' bad showing is due to the fact that they have been playing with clubs which had plenty of spring practice, while they went into action without any preparation for it. He thinks they will soon strike their gait. A sore arm has kept Boyle from going into the box, and he did not accompany the team to Boston or Philadelphia. He says he is practicing hard every day, and hopes will never forsake us, and we shall be as soon to have a "salary arm." Referring to the falling off in attendance he says that both New York clubs are not drawing what one club drew last year, and thinks it evidences a decline in base ball. He acknowledges that the League has a very hard row to hoe in New York, where, he says, almost everybody is with the Brotherhood. Gleason, of the Philadelphias, is, says the ex-Hoosier, pitching a wonderful > game and Rusie is not far behind him. This letter of Boyle's recalls an incident of some weeks ago, about the time Glasscock arrived here from Wheeling. Last season Glasscock had several tilts with Henry in carrying out his determination to have the latter do his share of the box-work, and he made up his mind that this year he would have a definite understanding before the season opened. Accordingly, he had an interview with Boyle, and it was arranged that Henry should pitch e third game this season, and not be called into the box oftener, unless the emergency was great. In addition he was to get into condition at once. But Glasscock is not managing the New York team.

No Step of the Kind Thought Of. Messrs. Brush and Schmidt say they have no knowledge whatever of the intention attributed to them of taking hold of the Pittsburg club. The latter says, as was stated in the Journal yesterday morning, that his visit to Pittsburg had no connection with or bearing upon base-ball mattion with or bearing upon base-ball matters, and that he saw no one connected with either the Pittsburg League or Brotherhood team while in that city.

"I cannot prevent the publication of these wild stories," said Mr. Brush last night, referring to the latest fairy tale concerning Pittsburg's coming here. "I told the author of this last one that I knew nothing of such a move, and Mr. Schmidt told him the same, but he seems to have paid no attention to that fact. We would be quite likely to know it if we were going to take hold of the Pittsburg club, or the club was to be transferred here. Such a thing is not contemplated."

St. Louis, May 4.-Over 6,000 people saw Louisville win a one-sided game from St. Louis this afternoon. The visitors put Goodall in the box to do their pitching. and the Browns could only get two hits off him in eight innings. Mr. Von der Ahe tried an East St. Louis amateur, named Millard, at second base, and he proved a dismal failure, making three costly errors. Stivetts lost heart early in the game, and at the end of the sixth inning gave way to Wi sock. In the first half of the ninth the Browns began to bat Goodall in whirlwind style, making three runs a man on third, another on second and nobody out.

It was threatening rain and the Louisvilles Umpire O'Brien called time. The rain lasted just thirty-five minutes, and then the weather cleared beautifully, but too late for play to be resumed. Score:

THE CLEVELAND-DANA MATTER. The Young Man Who Interviewed the Ex-President Should Speak Up.

Philadelphia Inquirer. The Cleveland-Dana controversy is still the subject of much acrimonious and undeterminate discussion. There have been all sorts of accusations and denials on both sides, until the truth of the matter is being more completely hid than in the begin-ning. Mr. Cleveland's friends appear to think it important that he should be relieved of having said the things imputed to him in the World (which interview was telegraphed to The Inquirer), and so the reporter who wrote the article which has reporter who wrote the article which has created all this rumpus is evidently to be made the scape-goat. No one will disagree with the proposition that he should be, if he deserves it, but, on the other hand, if he made a truthful record of the ex-President's language, as his reputation is dearer to him than that of any other man, even although he has been the President of the United States, he is a very foolish man if he permits himself to he President of the United States, he is a very foolish man if he permits himself to be placed in a false position, even for the exigencies of a political party. This is a phase of the question which interests journalism as well as the political world. The young man who visited Mr. Cleveland in his office and sought his views upon Mr. Dana's declaration that the ex-President was seeking release from a dangerous increase in fat by resort to the treatment of a specialist, is Mr. Fred Crawford, a brother of Mr. T. C. Craword, the London correspondent of the World. Mr. Fred Crawford is recognized in his profession as one of the most careful, painstaking and one of the most careful, painstaking and conscientious members. I believe him incapable of deliberate misrepresentation. Further than that I know, beyond all question of dispute, that one-half of the interview was written by Mr. Cleveland himself in his own office. The kind of man Mr. Crawford is is shown by the fact that after he had read the editorial in last Sunday's World, in which the authenticity of all but fourteen lines of the interview was disavowed, he, the very next day, wrote and handed in his resignation as a member of the World's staff. I had supposed that be-fore this he would make some public declaration concerning the affair. He is certainly very foolish if he doesn't.

CONTESTS IN ORATORY.

Homily on the Floods of Eloquence Annually Let Loose by College Students. Nebraska State Journal. The oratorical prize contests among the colleges and universities of the Northwest are of somewhat doubtful utility. The sort of oratory that is encouraged by the prizes is not particularly remunerative to the contestants or useful to the public. There is a sameness in the subjects selected and in the style of sophomorical elecution that is promoted that cannot be considered a branch of legitimate education, and the result of the canvass by the judges furnishes no indication of the merits of the courses pursued in the contending States or educational institutions.

The bad blood that has been engendered in Nebraska over the alleged plaigiarism of the student, who was selected as the State representative out of the four contestants, is a matter of regret, especially in view of more than 20,000 people at the opening | the fact that almost universally the ideas esented in these orations are of the trites and the style of composition of the kind that older critics would designate as "high falutin." Now it is no discredit to a college student that in his soaring after the infinite he falls into "nigh falutin." It is as natural and innocent as any other ebullition of youthful blood. The drawback is, that in after years the accomplished lawyer or distinguished scientist who looks back at the florid performance, and literary pyrotechnics of his college days, regrets that they were so ostentationsly The League clubs play to-day as follows: displayed and that the occasion of their New York at Brooklyn, Boston at Phila-delphia, Pittsburg at Cleveland, Cincinnati and that attention was called to them unat Chicago. Advice to Mothers,

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It re-lieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best-known remedy for diarrhea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-

COLDs are flying about in the air thicker than flakes in a snow-storm. Everybody is catching them, but everybody knows or ought to know how to get rid of them. A few doses of Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and preste! they are gone. Why continue to cough, with a positive cure at hand! Sold by all druggists.
